

Colonel(ret'd) Ron Guidinger

Ron served in Canada's Air Force for 28 years as a fighter pilot and senior officer, retiring as a Colonel in 1998.

For the next seven years, Ron was senior manager of systems for General Dynamics Canada, executing Project Management responsibilities for military C3 systems and developing contracts providing repair, overhaul, and engineering support for the Canadian Army. He is a seasoned Project

Management Professional (PMP) who has maintained his certification in good standing since 2003.

Thereafter, he spent another seven years as VP and GM of the Services and Support Division of Raytheon Canada, a technology leader in defence, homeland security, and government applications. Ron led a division-wide turnaround, doubling the top and bottom-line in five years.

Most recently, Ron applies his energy and leadership experience to chairing two groups of Business Executives in Calgary under the auspices of TEC (The Executive Committee) Canada. He is part of the wider TEC community whose members represent nearly $50 billion in annual revenues and over 100,000 employees.

In addition to Leadership Coaching and mentoring, Ron conducts workshops on Risk Management and other key elements of Project Management and Business.
